

J Bird

August 28th 2010?

the waves across the surface like ripples are on water you are those pulsations on them known like wind is known but organized unlike wind you are - all its effect, its force And so, but unlike all the air in which you are suspended like words, thoughts-you are by air's side in movement its touch by your tongue becomes spoken as like differentiated air parts cool by warm you move like wind's arrangement with the storm cloud-with the blue sky,

- with the cool night and sea

- structured more highly than that chaos, brings you cool breeze is your clear mind there that spells it.

yet why not go on just some longer cross the surface, water, by which waves on your arrival